THIS PERFECTLY APPOINTED wine cellar is actually tucked just a half-flight down from the main floor and a half-flight up from the basement level. Ebony Gloss paint by Pittsburgh Paints and intentional lighting keep the spotlight on the wine. The wife found the painting of an Italian village (very fitting in a wine cellar!) at the Ann Arbor Art Fair. The wooden slab embossed with the phrase, "With Good Wine—there should be Music!" is courtesy of the husband who is known for his playlists. The small table, made by Edgework Creative in Columbus, Ohio, is for opening and tasting bottles of wine. The racks have an industrial vibe to complement the home's similar feel. "The racks are separated into the reachable (help yourself) and the not reachable (Do not make a big mistake!)," says the wife. She also adds that the wine cellar is "intentionally simple," as the home's great room and deck with their Lake Michigan views are the preferred places for wine sipping. 🍷
